How To Pick The Right Queen Size Duvet Cover For Your Bedroom

One of the first things that you need to do when you are considering which one to purchase is what the feel of the room is. Do you want a formal bedroom or one that is comfortable and makes you feel completely relaxed? The kind of pattern and materials will depend on this so it is the point at which you need to begin. A formal queen size duvet cover may have a classic toile pattern or be made of a more formal material such as silk or satin. A more relaxed duvet cover may be made of microfiber, flannel or velvet. Patterns may include stripes, color blocking or even plaid.

Once you have determined what you want as far as the feel of the bedroom, you also need to look at who will be using the room. If a man will be sleeping in the room, chances are that he will want a more masculine look than if a woman is the only one staying there. As well, if it is a child who will be the recipient of the duvet cover, you should pick something that is not too mature but which can also grow with the child as they age.

There are also ways to make a queen size duvet cover more versatile and affordable. Consider purchasing one that is part of a bedroom set. They may be more expensive but if you also receive a bed skirt, shams and other items this can reduce the cost of individual pieces. It can also give a wonderfully coordinated look to a room. You also want to make sure that you are picking a duvet cover which is reversible. This can be great for a quick but coordinated look change. You simply flip the cover over or turn it inside out, depending on how it reverses.

You want to look for good workmanship on any queen size duvet cover that you purchase. Look for seams which are well made and unlikely to let go. The closing method such as a zipper or buttons should be well constructed and unlikely to let go if it is manipulated repeatedly. It should also be in a position that will not get in the way or rub you when you sleep.

Picking the right duvet can be a great first step in decorating any bedroom. Choose wisely and sleep well.
